The final Plenary Sessions aim to provide an opportunity for a collective scientific reflection on the topics explored within the three parallel sessions of the symposium, i.e.: the individual memory, the collective memory and the politics and places of memory (i.e. the public memory). This Plenary Sessions will be coordinated by three Chairs, who will give a 20-minute talk about each specific topic. They will be assisted by the parallel sessions Chairs, who will summarize the contents and discussions of their specific sessions. A debate will follow, which is open to all speakers. A service of simultaneous translation will be available in order to facilitate the discussion.
